DAILY MESSAGE OF SAINT JOSEPH, TRANSMITTED IN THE MARIAN CENTER OF FIGUEIRA, MINAS GERAIS, BRAZIL, TO THE VISIONARY SISTER LUCÍA DE JESÚS

XXIX - Dialoge Between Nature and God

When the soul of Nature enters into dialogue with God, what does it say? How is it answered by its Creator?

The soul of Nature speaks with God in silence, through the expression of beauty and the movement of the elements. The soul of Nature expresses its pain to the Creator through the wind, the rain, the closed and silent sky, the time that seems to stand still so as to feel the life of the Earth.

Nature expresses its self-giving and love through the flowers, fruits, the green leaves and the leaves that are dried, surrendering to renewal. It speaks through the deep silence of the oceans, through their balance and surrender, their constant and selfless service, their effort to keep the Project of the Creator alive for this world alive.

The soul of Nature speaks with God through the silence of the earth, renewing in its deepest layers the most ancient records of humanity, transforming with fire that which has happened and giving to the planet a substance that nurtures, that supplies, that sustains.

And God responds to Nature with the sun that shines and communicates life, with the night that restores and brings encouragement, with the breath that becomes air and breathing so that, in spite of all the density of the planet, there may be Spirit within the spirit of beings. God responds to Nature with gratitude, renewing Nature's perfection and beauty, its life and its form, its peace.

May this dialogue, children, teach you to serve unconditionally, to give of yourselves out of love, to express peace even in times of chaos, to adore in silence when the world becomes stirred and to receive from the Lord and the Love of His infinite Heart.

You have My blessing for this.

The Most Chaste Saint Joseph
